Commissioner's Food Safety Forum set for Aug. 28

New federal rules governing produce safety will be among the topics at the eighth annual Commissioner's Food Safety Forum on Aug. 28.

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler will host the event from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the Expo Center at the State Fairgrounds in Raleigh. The event is open to farmers, food businesses, regulators, health professionals and others with an interest in food safety. Admission is free, and lunch will be provided.

"With passage of the federal Food Safety Modernization Act, producers and growers are anticipating the impending release of major rules and regulations regarding preventive measures and produce safety," Troxler said. "Our agenda will focus on these rules in an effort to help prepare the industry for the changes."

Keynote speakers will be Leanne Skelton, senior policy analyst with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, and Dr. Liz Wagstrom, chief veterinarian for the National Pork Producers Council. Skelton's presentation will focus on the new federal produce rules and the protective measures required by them. Wagstrom will speak about food safety issues in the meat industry.

Other speakers will include Thomas Mack of Dole Food Co. and Bob Reinhard of the Hillshire Brands Co., who will provide a food-industry perspective about the rules. Ben Chapman, a food safety specialist at N.C. State University, will talk about food safety training for farmers markets. Troxler also will speak at the forum.

Even though admission to the forum is free, registration is encouraged. To register, go online to www.ncagr.gov/nfoodsafetyforum or contact Chrissy Waggett at 919-707-3008.

NCDA&CS revamps website for agronomic reports

A fresh look awaits members of the public who visit the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' website to search for their agronomic reports.

The site has been redesigned to make searching for reports easier and provide useful new features.

Three years of programming funded by the N.C. Tobacco Trust Fund Commission have made this initial improvement possible, and additional features are scheduled to be implemented later this year.

"The public will find the new search and download features more user-friendly," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

"And growers who use GPS should notice more compatibility with their software."

To check out the new site, visit www.ncagr.gov/agronomi and select "Find Your Report" from the left-column navigation bar.

The changes to the website are not just superficial, said Dr. Colleen Hudak-Wise, director of the department's Agronomic Services Division. Behind the scenes, the entire data-gathering mechanics of the agronomic laboratories have been reworked.

Although full benefits of the reprogramming will not be obvious to users, they will notice the agronomic reports have a new design and include explanatory information and hyperlinks to additional resources.

The most significant change in design is in the soil test reports for home and garden samples, Hudak-Wise said. "These reports are now streamlined to focus on information most critical to home gardeners: soil pH and recommendations for lime and fertilizer. Soil pH and nutrient levels are displayed graphically so clients can easily see if their soil parameters are above, below or within optimum ranges," she said. Detailed guidelines explain how to select and apply lime and fertilizer.

The new website also contains advanced features for more experienced users. Foremost is the ability to access a recent soil report and generate revised fertilizer recommendations for a different crop. With this feature, growers will no longer have to consult with a staff agronomist to get new recommendations when their crop plans change. Another feature allows farmers who use GPS software to map their fields and apply amendments, to download report data in XML format.

In addition, returning users now have the option to update their contact information online. They can create a password-

From time to time I use this column to talk about some area of work one of our divisions is involved in. This month I want to use the column to caution equine owners about a potentially deadly, but preventable, equine disease that we are starting to see in the state.

Equine owners need to be aware that North Carolina has had its first three cases of Eastern Equine Encephalomyelitis this year, which resulted in two horses having to be euthanized and one dying. Two cases occurred in Robeson County, both involving 2-year-old horses; a third case was in Bladen County and involved a 7-year-old stallion.

Unfortunately, these are not likely to be the only cases we see this year. Our state veterinarian, Dr. David Marshall, anticipates a better-than-average mosquito season given the mild winter and the number of spring and summer rains we have had. Mosquitoes can breed in any puddle that lasts four days or more.

EEE is a mosquito-borne disease that, fortunately, can be prevented in equine through vaccinations. It causes inflammation or swelling of the brain and spinal cord. Symptoms include impaired vision, aimless wandering, head pressing, circling, inability to swallow, irregular staggering gait, paralysis, convulsions and death. I share this information in hopes horse owners will talk with their veterinarians now about a vaccination plan to protect their animals from EEE and another mosquito-borne disease, West Nile virus. The EEE and WNV vaccinations initially require two doses for horses, mules and donkeys that have no prior vaccination history. So it is important to get started now.

Mosquitoes are part of the landscape of the South, but there are a number of measures horse owners can take to help reduce the risk of their animals coming into contact with them. For starters, they can look to reduce any standing water, which can add to the mosquito population. Other suggestions for reducing exposure include keeping horses in stalls at night, using insect screens and fans and turning off lights after dusk. Insect repellents may also be effective if used as directed.

2012 State Fair premium books available

Young or old, there is a competition for everyone at the N.C. State Fair. Each year, North Carolinians submit more than 32,000 entries into contests in nearly 50 categories, including everything from horticulture and Web design to culinary arts and livestock. This year, more than $600,000 in prizes will be awarded along with thousands of ribbons and plenty of bragging rights.

The 2012 State Fair Premium Book is now available online at www.ncstatefair.org, and a limited number of hard copies are available at the Administration Building at the N.C. State Fairgrounds at 1025 Blue Ridge Road in Raleigh.

The Premium Book is an important tool for contestants. It includes contest rules, deadlines and judging criteria, as well as other valuable information. For the first time, it has been split into two separate books – one for general entries and a second for livestock.

“Traditionally, premiums, or cash prizes, were offered at the N.C. State Fair as an incentive to encourage agricultural advances,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “Over time, more and more categories were added, giving us the diverse offering of competitions we are familiar with today.”

Two additional competitions have been added this year. Those are a beer brewing competition, as well as a daily cookie decorating contest for kids. The beer competition will feature 15 varieties of home-brewed and commercially produced beers. The Kids Kookie Decorating Kontest will be held Oct. 17-20 at 4 p.m. Each afternoon, kids of a different age group will be allowed to decorate cookies for cash prizes and ribbons.

Check the 2012 Premium Book for the deadlines of each individual competition.

N.C. State Fair announces 2012 concert schedule

The 2012 State Fair boasts an impressive lineup of concerts, featuring a variety of talented country, contemporary Christian, pop rock and R&B artists and bands, as well as a special fundraising concert showcasing local college a cappella groups.

Thursday, Oct. 11, three local university a cappella groups will perform in the Varsity Vocal Showcase Presented by Mattress Firm. Groups from Duke, N.C. State University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill will perform. All proceeds from ticket sales will go to the performing groups.

Friday, Oct. 12 will bring some of Christian music's brightest stars to Dorton Arena. Matthew West and Sanctus Real, both Grammy nominees and Dove Award winners, will be taking the stage. Matthew West is known for his No. 1 hit singles "More" and "The Motions," while Sanctus Real is known for many singles, including "The Face of Love" and "Lead Me."

Country artist Jake

Owen will be performing on Saturday, Oct.

13. Owen, who entered the country music scene in 2006, rose to fame quickly with hits like "Barefoot Blue Jean Night," "Alone With You" and "Don't Think I Can't Love You."

The American Music Award's New Artist of the Year for 2011, Hot Chelle Rae will take the stage on Sunday, Oct. 14. The internationally acclaimed pop rock group is known for its upbeat hits "Tonight Tonight" and "I Like It Like That."

North Carolina's own country star, Scotty McCreery, will be performing on Monday and Tuesday (Oct. 15 and 16). Although the Monday show was previously announced and almost immediately sold out, fans who weren't able to get tickets still have a chance to see McCreery live in concert. The American Idol winner will be performing some of his most popular hits, including "I Love You This Big," "The Trouble With Girls" and "Water Tower Town."

Jason Michael Carroll, another North Carolina native, will be performing Wednesday, Oct. 17. The rising country star has recorded many Top 40 country hits, including "Alyssa Lies" and "I Can Sleep When I'm Dead."

R&B artist Brian McKnight will be performing Thursday, Oct. 18. He has been nominated for 16 Grammy Awards and is best known for his "Back at One" album, which sold more than 3 million copies.

Michael W. Smith is one of Christian music's most legendary artists. Smith has released 20 albums since 1983 and has become well-known as a singer, songwriter and worship leader both in the U.S. and around the world. Some of his hits include "My Place in this World," "Friends" and "Healing Rain." He will perform Friday, Oct. 19.

Country star Billy Currington will take the stage on Saturday, Oct. 20. Currington is well-known for his lighthearted tunes, as well as the unique influences of R&B and beach music in his songs. Currington will likely be performing many of his top hits, including "People are Crazy" and "Pretty Good at Drinkin' Beer."

Corey Smith, known for his distinct mix of country, rock and blues, will be closing out the 2012 N.C. State Fair concert series on Sunday, Oct. 21. Smith, a former high school teacher, has released six albums, but is best known for his most recent album. "The Broken Record" features his most popular song to date, "Twenty One."

Shows begin at 7:30 p.m. and doors open at 6:30 p.m.

Tickets will go on sale Aug. 1 at 10 a.m. online at www.ncstatefair.org. Prices range from $5 to $25 as outlined below:

- Oct. 11: Varsity Vocal Showcase, $10;
- Oct. 12: Matthew West and Sanctus Real, $10;
- Oct. 13: Jake Owen, $10;
- Oct. 14: Hot Chelle Rae, $15;
