On the Horizon

Southern Farm Show Feb. 1-3

The Southern Farm Show will be held Feb 1-3 at the N.C. State Fairgrounds in Raleigh. The event is the largest agricultural trade show in the Carolinas and Virginia, drawing more than 400 equipment dealers, agribusinesses, agricultural consultants and related businesses.

A number of special industry meetings will be held during the farm show, including the N.C. Pork Conference and the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' Agricultural Development Forum on Feb. 2; the Tobacco Farm Life Museum breakfast benefit and the annual meeting of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina on Feb. 3.

Pesticide continuing education credits are offered through workshops during the show. In addition, the Southern National Draft Horse Pull and Coon Mule Jump will be held Feb. 3 at 6 p.m. in the Hunt Horse Complex.

Flooding, drought cause concern about winter hay supply; website launched to connect buyers and sellers

Flooding in eastern North Carolina and drought in western counties has state agricultural officials concerned about feeding livestock and horses this winter.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services is utilizing a website, www.ncagr.gov/hay-alert, to help livestock and horse owners source hay.

The Hay Alert website was first launched during the drought in 2002 and used again in 2007. It is similar to Craigslist, in which users can post hay for sale or hay wanted ads. The department will not be involved in the transaction beyond hosting the website.

"We're trying to help farmers meet the needs for livestock and horses this winter," said Agriculture

Commissioner Steve Troxler. "Earlier this fall, we expected to have eastern hay to fill the void in the west, but the flood has ruined so much of the eastern crop. We encourage farmers to go ahead and start securing their hay for the winter."

Farmers are encouraged to work with their local cooperative extension agent to set up a winter feed plan. They are also reminded that many areas of North Carolina are under quarantine for plant pests and care should be taken to not introduce pests into new areas. Check with the NCDA&CS Plant Industry Division for guidance if moving hay from a quarantine area to a non-quarantine area.

NCDA&CS awards specialty-crop block grants

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services awarded 11 federally funded specialty-crop block grants for 2016, covering agricultural research and marketing projects.

"More than $1 million was awarded this year, and all of these projects will help further the state's $84 billion agriculture industry," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "Selected projects ranged from breeding programs and soil improvements to food safety initiatives and marketing."

North Carolina's specialty crops include fruits, vegetables, tree nuts, dried fruits, horticulture, Christmas trees, turfgrass and sod, and nursery and greenhouse crops. Grant proposals were submitted by non-profit organizations, commodity groups, government agencies and universities.

The department awarded grants to the following recipients and projects:

- The Altapass Foundation – Orchard at Altapass Heirloom Apple Trees;
- Carolina Farm Stewardship Association – Local Produce Safety Initiative;
- N.C. Christmas Tree Association – Targeting Millennials with Fraser Fir Promotions;

Uncle!

Last month my column focused on the flooding that was taking place across many areas of Eastern North Carolina following Hurricane Matthew. Unfortunately this month, I find myself focused on yet another weather-related challenge to agriculture – the drought in the Western part of the state. It seems like we just can't catch a break this year.

The drought is expected to tighten essential hay stocks and water supplies for cattle and horses. Adding to the concern, Hurricane Matthew likely took away any surplus hay that Eastern growers had that could have helped fill the void in the West.

Some farmers in Western North Carolina say the situation there is worse than in 2007. Many are already feeding hay to their livestock and have been for a while. That means the demand for hay will only increase as we get into winter.

For that reason, it is important to secure hay sooner versus later. It may seem like you still have plenty of time, but that likely isn't the case. I strongly urge you not to wait until the barn is empty to try to restock.

If you haven't already, I would suggest you contact your extension agent and make a winter feed plan now. Another good resource is the department's Hay Alert website, which the article at the top of this page focuses on. The website provides an online forum to post ads for hay for sale or wanted. You can access it at www.ncagr.gov/hayalert.

It is important to note that the department hosts the website, but is not involved in transactions between buyers and sellers.

I continue to hear from farmers across the state who are struggling with these challenges. For some, this marks back-to-back seasons of poor production. I know a single bad year is difficult to bounce back from, and two is even harder.

We do not have any overall totals on agricultural losses, but no doubt it will be significant as the flooding that followed Hurricane Matthew impacted a lot of our top agricultural counties.

We know we had some poultry and hog losses following the hurricane, including 1.8 million poultry and 2,800 hogs. I believe these losses would have been higher were it not for the preparations swine and poultry producers took before the storm.

We will continue to monitor both the hurricane recovery efforts and the ongoing drought in the West.

As of press time, fire crews with our N.C. Forest Service are continuing to battle wildfires in Western N.C. that have burned thousands of acres of forestlands. The U.S. Forest Service is also battling fires on federal lands in those areas. We are grateful for the assistance from other fire department crews as well, because

New agronomists hired for northeastern, central regions

Carla Pugh and Josh Mays have recently been named regional agronomists.

Pugh works with growers in Bertie, Camden, Chowan, Currituck, Gates, Hertford, Pasquotank and Perquimans counties.

Mays works with growers in Anson, Guilford, Lee, Montgomery, Moore, Randolph and Richmond counties.

"We're pleased to have Carla join our staff," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "Her broad range of experience and familiarity with regional agricultural issues will make her a valuable resource for growers seeking advice on how to increase crop nutrition and yield."

Pugh served as an agricultural extension agent for Tyrrell and surrounding counties from 2004 through 2008, where she covered field and horticultural crops. She joins the department after eight years with the N.C. Department of Transportation, where she worked with erosion and sediment control projects.

She earned a Bachelor of Science degree from N.C. State University in agricultural business, with a minor in horticultural science. Pugh also earned an engineering degree and has completed a number of master's-level courses in crop science.

Mays holds a bachelor's degree in agricultural education and professional service from N.C. A&T State University and a turf management degree from N.C. State University. He is currently pursuing a master's degree in agricultural education and professional service from N.C. A&T.

"Josh's previous work experience at the Sandhills Research Station, as well as working as a consultant in the eastern part of the state, has given him a great deal of experience with the diverse horticultural and field crops and soil types in this region," Troxler said. "He will be a knowledgeable resource for growers seeking advice on improving crop nutrition or managing plant-parasitic nematodes."

Regional agronomists are part of the Field Services Section of the department's Agronomic

Services Division. They provide advice on crop fertilization, nutrient management, lime needs, soil testing, plant tissue analysis, use of animal wastes and composts, nematode analysis, and testing of source water and nutrient solutions.

Growers interested in arranging consultations can contact Pugh at 252-944-5929 or at carla.pugh@ncagr.gov; or Mays at 910-973-0421 or at josh.mays@ncagr.gov.

State Fair wraps up with second largest attendance

The 2016 N.C. State Fair is in the books, with the second largest attendance on record with 1,028,364 visitors.

In addition, the annual Food Lion Hunger Relief Day food drive saw a strong year, raising over 240,000 pounds of food for those in need. That equals more than 200,000 meals. Forty percent of the amount raised will go to help people in counties affected by Hurricane Matthew.

Mark your calendar for Oct. 12-22.

Bucolic briefs

The Carolina Swap Meet for pigeons, bantams and other birds will be held Dec. 10 from 8:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at Everett Farm, 305 Macedonia Church Road, Monroe. For more information, contact Les Everett at 704-577-3905.

As a reminder, peak-season fees now apply for soil samples submitted to the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Agronomic Services Lab. Cost is $4 a sample through March 31. After that date, soil testing will be free to North Carolina residents.

County governments and non-profit groups pursuing farmland preservation projects have until 5 p.m. on Dec. 16 to apply for funding assistance from the N.C. Agricultural Development and Farmland Preservation Trust Fund. This year's request for proposals includes statewide general appropriations for traditional farm preservation projects and conservation easement applications to protect military-base and training buffers. The fund supports projects that encourage the preservation of qualifying agricultural, horticultural and forest lands to foster the growth, development and sustainability of family farms. Grants can be awarded to secure agricultural conservation easements on lands used for agricultural production; to support public and private enterprise programs that promote profitable and sustainable agricultural, horticultural and forestland activities; and for the development of agricultural plans. Military-designated grants are restricted to easement-related projects. The application and guidelines are available at www.ncadfp.org/CycleX.htm. Call 919-707-3072 with questions.

Beekeepers with bees for rent and growers interested in bee pollination services can post their information on the BeeLinked website at www.ncagr.com/beelinked. The site is hosted by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and the N.C. State University Apiculture Program. Anyone interested in listing their information can do so by filling out an online Submit Your Ad form on the BeeLinked page or by contacting NCDA&CS at 919-233-8214 or by email at NCHoneybee@ncagr.gov or call NCSU at 919-515-1660. The NCDA&CS Plant Industry Division regulates the movement of agricultural or related items capable of spreading harmful insects, diseases, and other pests. Beekeepers participating in this program will be required to comply with all honey and bee industry regulations.

N.C. Industrial Hemp Commission begins work

The N.C. Industrial Hemp Commission recently held its first meeting, officially beginning work to establish rules governing a pilot program for industrial hemp production in North Carolina.

The commission's first order of business was to elect Dr. Tom Melton, of N.C. State University as its chairman. Melton is deputy director of N.C. Cooperative Extension and leader of the Agriculture and Natural Resources Program.

The commission came about following congressional changes to U.S. farm policies that allowed institutions of higher education and state departments of agriculture to participate in research-focused pilot programs for industrial hemp production.

Interest in the crop has grown because industrial hemp has numerous uses as a fiber and food crop. Plant extracts also have been reported to have pharmaceutical benefits. Industrial hemp is distinguished from marijuana by having less than 0.3 percent of the psychoactive chemical known as THC, compared to 3 to 15 percent or higher in marijuana. Hemp is not new to North Carolina. It was cultivated in the 1800s and early 1900s primarily for its fiber.

In 2015, the N.C. General Assembly passed Senate Bill 313 calling for the creation of the Industrial Hemp Commission. The commission was specifically charged with developing rules and a licensing structure so the state would stay within federal laws.

"Our goal is to have a 2017 industrial hemp crop, but there are many, many steps we must work through before we can even put seed in the ground," said Dr. Sandy Stewart, vice chairman of the commission and director of the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services Research Stations Division.

"While the initial work has begun, farmers need to realistically understand that there are still significant bridges to cross between now and May of 2017, when planting could begin," Stewart said. "That includes navigating import protocols to obtain seeds, since they would likely have to come from outside the United States."

To begin the process for obtaining seeds for a first planting, NCDA&CS Plant Industry Director Vernon Cox has registered the department as an importer with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

The commission will next focus on drafting rules for a system to permit growers to take part in the pilot program.

By law, commission members must represent agriculture, ag research or law enforcement, with ag-related members appointed by Commissioner of Agriculture Steve Troxler, research-related members appointed by Gov. Pat McCrory and law enforcement members appointed by Senate President Pro Tempore Phil Berger and Speaker of the House Tim Moore.

Commission members by appointment are:

Troxler appointees: Guy Carpenter, an agribusiness and marketing professional from New Hanover County; Billy McLawhorn, a crop consultant from Craven County; Fen Rascoe, a farmer from Bertie County; Pat Short, a farmer from Guilford County; and Stewart.

McCrory appointees: Melton, NCSU; Dr. Guochen Yang, N.C. A&T State University;

Senate appointee: Cary Police Chief Tony Godwin;

House appointee: Sheriff Sam Page, Rockingham County.

Many groups attended the commission's first meeting, including representatives from BioRegen Innovations Coop, Carolina Farm Stewardship Association, the N.C. Industrial Hemp Association, N.C. Hemp Industries Association and hemp-related businesses. To be notified of upcoming meetings or other commission-related news, go to www.ncagr.gov/hemp/ and provide email information in the mailing list block.

Poultry & Supplies For Sale

Highly pathogenic avian influenza alert

In 2015, HPAI was found in the wildfowl population in the United States, representing a risk for poultry owners. At this time no cases have been found in North Carolina.

Poultry owners are encouraged, however, to watch their birds for any signs of illness and to contact a veterinarian if they find sick birds.

Growers can also contact one of four NCDA&CS regional veterinary diagnostic labs for more information. Go to www.ncagr.gov/vet/ncvdl/VetLabFacilitiesDirectory.html for contact information.

As this disease can spread by infected wildfowl, it is important to eliminate opportunities for your birds to come in contact with wild birds.

POULTRY & SUPPLIES

Owners are also urged to be extra mindful of biosecurity measures to prevent the spread of this disease.

This includes quarantining any new poultry additions from your existing flock for two to three weeks to observe for signs of sickness, have a dedicated pair of shoes and clothing for working with birds that stay on your property, be mindful if driving onto property with poultry as the disease can spread by vehicles. More information about HPAI can be found at www.ncagr.gov/avianflu.

N.C. State Fair Sale of Champions draws $166,500

Junior winners in the N.C. State Fair livestock shows drew $166,500 for the top steers, barrows, lambs, goats and turkeys in the Junior Livestock Sale of Champions at the N.C. State Fair on Oct. 15.

“We are proud that so many businesses and organizations turned out to support the hard work of all these junior exhibitors,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “The money raised will go a long way towards college educations, scholarships and educational outreach.”

Farm Bureau Insurance purchased the grand champion lamb (pictured center left), which was also named the grand champion Got to Be NC market lamb, for $16,500. The lamb was shown by Abigail Wilson, 13, of China Grove. Farm Credit Associations of North Carolina purchased the reserve champion lamb shown by Cynthia Connolly, 14, of Mt. Ulla for $10,500.

Tractor Supply Company purchased the grand champion meat goat (pictured top right), which was also named and grand champion Got to Be NC meat goat shown by Kali Mabe of Sandy Ridge for $15,750. The reserve grand champion meat goat shown by Cal-ey Mayo of Whitakers was purchased by Iron Horse Auction Company and McBride Concessions for $9,000.

Hunter McMillen, 9, of Grandy showed the grand champion market barrow (pictured center right), which was purchased for $18,000 by the N.C. Pork Council, Smithfield Farmland, Hog Slat and Duplin Marketing.

The grand champion Got to Be NC and reserve grand champion barrow was shown by Emma Barret, 11, of Pinetown. It was purchased for $18,500 by the N.C. Pork Council, Smithfield Farmland, Hog Slat and Duplin Marketing.

To begin the sale, auctioneer E.B. Harris of Warrenton auctioned off a livestock cane. Deborah Johnson had the winning bid of $900. Money from the sale of the cane will go into the general livestock scholarship fund.

The youth receive 60 percent of the purchase amount, while the remaining 40 percent goes to support youth scholarships and livestock programs in North Carolina.

Remaining junior livestock animals were sold in a truckload auction.
