On the Horizon

Celebrate Farm-City Week Nov. 16-22

Farm-City Week is an opportunity to celebrate the connection between the farmers and ranchers and the consumers who rely on them for food and fiber. This year, Farm-City Week will be celebrated Nov. 16-22, with events planned in communities across the state and nation.

Today, less than 2 percent of the world population feeds the remaining 98 percent. As we approach the holidays and prepare to gather with families and friends, don't forget to take a minute to thank a farmer for the food he has provided.

North Carolina farmers produce many items you will find on the Thanksgiving table. Here are some traditional foods for thought that make North Carolina a leader in production nationally: Ham, turkey, sweet potatoes, Irish potatoes, corn, eggs, cucumbers/pickles and dairy products.

North Carolina State Fair runs Oct. 11-21

A tree that moves, a family that soars and a man who is his own four-piece band. These are just some of the new attractions awaiting visitors to the 2012 N.C. State Fair, to be held Oct. 11-21 at the N.C. State Fairgrounds.

"From agricultural exhibits to midway attractions, there's something for everyone at the North Carolina State Fair," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "It's no surprise that we've seen more than a million people come to the fair each of the past two years."

Free Entertainment

Several new entertainers will be joining the lineup of free performances, musical acts and roaming entertainment available at the fair, including the Kenya Safari Acrobats. The troupe, founded by Kenya natives living in Greensboro, combines action and acrobatics into a high-energy show. Another new performance is Jim Cruise the Spoon Man. Cruise will wow crowds at the Kid-land Stage with his daily spoon-playing shows.

New musical performers will take to the Kitchen-craft Waterfall Stage on the Dorton Arena lawn. Reality Show Band will bring a mix of contemporary and classic chart-toppers to the stage each day except Military Appreciation Day, Wednesday, Oct. 17. Louisburg native and country musician Larry Frick will take the stage for the last weekend of the fair, Oct. 18-21. On the Bluegrass Stage, fairgoers can sit down and enjoy the sounds of Larry Cordle. The Kentucky native will perform original bluegrass songs daily.

Fairgoers also should be on the lookout for two new roaming acts at this year's fair. Marc Dobson, the One Man Band, will be roaming the grounds daily. Equipped with a mechanized drum set, guitar, harmonica and microphone, Dobson will perform popular songs to the delight of the crowd. At the Flower and Garden Show, the Tree of Life will be making rounds and interacting with visitors alongside last year's crowd-pleaser, Di-Vine, the living vine.

Exhibits

The Village of Yesteryear, a staple of the fair for more than 60 years, is welcoming several new artists to its exhibit of crafters and artisans. The artists include Chris Morgan of Selma, wet plate photography; Jeri Buek of Hendersonville, wool appliqué, punch needle and penny rugs; Larry

Farmers, consider options when soil sampling

North Carolina farmers send more than 200,000 samples to the state's soil testing lab from mid-October through February.

Eager to plan for the next season, they often find themselves at a standstill waiting for test results. The situation is unfortunate because soil tests don't have to be done every year or, for that matter, in the fall.

"Soil testing is one of the best tools available to farmers, and we want to help them use it to their best advantage," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler.

"That's why the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services has a state-wide network of agronomists to give advice on optimal use of the service. Better-informed growers often discover that they have more flexibility in sampling and nutrient application."

Agronomist Dianne Farrer recently shared a few general soil sampling rules.

"First of all, soil sampling is not necessary every year, even where GPS is used," Farrer said. "Only fields subject to nutrient- or waste-management regulation must be sampled annually, which are usually fields where animal waste is applied.

"In typical cropping situations, sandy soils should be tested at least once every two years and clay soils every three to four years," she said. "If growers change crops or are concerned about leaching, they often sample more frequently, but it is not always necessary. There is an alternate approach."

Farrer illustrates her point this way: Suppose a grower has clay soils and a soil report that is a year or two old. He doesn't really need to sample again for another year, but would like to get recommendations for a different crop. Instead of sampling again, he can find his most recent soil report on the Agronomic Services Division's website and use the new "change crops" feature to generate a revised set of recommendations.

by Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler

Commissioner Troxler

I recently had the opportunity to induct two new members into the N.C. Mountain State Fair Livestock Hall of Fame during a ceremony at the Western N.C. Agricultural Center.

Both men were recognized for their outstanding contributions to the livestock shows at the Mountain State Fair. Anyone who is associated with livestock shows knows that it takes a lot of work to put these events on. We are fortunate to have a lot of folks who are committed to helping young people learn about preparing animals for the show ring and about the responsibility for their care.

This year's Hall of Fame inductees were Mike Stiles of Cherokee County and Steve Ledford of Macon County. Each received a plaque for their accomplishments, and a plaque will be displayed in the Livestock Sales Arena recognizing their induction.

I am proud to say Mike Stiles is an animal health technician with the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services. He has worked with the department for 27 years. Stiles has helped build the livestock shows at the Mountain State Fair, as well as county fairs throughout Western North Carolina, into the events they are today.

I've had the chance to get to know Mike over the past eight years, and he has had a tremendous impact on animal agriculture in Western North Carolina through his work monitoring animal health and through his personal involvement in the community.

Steve Ledford is a public works director for Macon County. He was one of the early contributors to the Mountain State Fair livestock shows, and continues to provide swine and cattle for exhibition. He also holds clinics at his farm to teach young people how to care for and show livestock.

The Mountain State Fair livestock shows would not be possible without the support of farmers, ranchers and other ag leaders in our community such as Steve Ledford.

I am proud to honor both of these men as a way of saying thanks and recognizing the support of so many like them. Congratulations.

Troxler shares plan for TVA funds in WNC

Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler recently outlined a plan for using $2.24 million in funds from the state's settlement with the Tennessee Valley Authority to benefit Western North Carolina.

The General Assembly appropriated the money to the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services for the current fiscal year. At Troxler's suggestion, legislators restricted use of the money to 17 western counties.

Under the department's plan, a portion of the money would go to the nonprofit WNC Communities to operate a competitive grant program focused on projects in the agricultural and forestry sector.

Money allocated to WNC Communities also would be used to enhance DuPont State Recreational Forest in Transylvania County. Possible uses include completion of a strategic plan and visitor education center for the forest.

The department would allocate the remainder of its TVA funds to the N.C. Agricultural Development and Farmland Preservation Trust Fund, which the department operates. These funds would be maintained separately from the trust fund's regular legislative appropriation. They would be earmarked for projects within the 17 counties.

The trust fund would award grants for projects that promote agricultural development and allow farmers to be more profitable, and support efforts to purchase conservation easements to preserve farmland.

In addition, the trust fund would use a sizable portion of its share of the settlement money to acquire property that is part of an 8,000-acre tract along the headwaters of the French Broad River's East Fork. The department would partner with the Carolina Mountain Land Conservancy on this project and attempt to leverage other dollars if possible.

The amount of money to be allocated to each of these funding categories has not been determined, Troxler said.

The following counties are eligible for funding: Avery, Buncombe, Burke, Cherokee, Clay, Graham, Haywood, Henderson, Jackson, Macon, Madison, McDowell, Mitchell, Swain, Transylvania, Watauga and Yancey.

About the settlement agreement

In June 2011, the Tennessee Valley Authority reached a negotiated settlement with North Carolina, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee to address excessive air pollution from its coal-fired power plants.

This settlement requires that TVA spend $350 million on environmental mitigation projects to address the impacts of past emissions. Communities near TVA's facilities will directly benefit from $350 million in environmental projects designed to reduce harmful air pollution and advance the Environmental Protection Agency's goals in addressing environmental justice issues. TVA will distribute a subset of the $350 million, a total of $60 million, to Alabama, Kentucky, North Carolina and Tennessee for these states to implement projects of their choosing from a list of categories in the consent decree.

The settlement allows North Carolina to direct its allocation, $11.2 million, over the next five years. (Source: Environmental Protection Agency) and Beth Lytle of Old Fort, cold process lye soap; William and Pamela Kennedy of Seagrove, crystalline pottery; Mary Phillips of Gatlinburg, Tenn., pressed wildflowers; Patricia Tierney of Raleigh, seed bead weaving; and Jim Huskins of Marion, handcrafted guitars, banjos and mandolins.

This year, the Cultivate a Career exhibit will dig deeper into the breadth of agriculture-related careers. Local craft brewers and coffee producers are just some of the professionals that will be on hand during the fair to answer questions and offer advice for those interested in pursuing an ag career.

A mobile dairy classroom will set up near the Expo Center for daily milking demonstrations. The traveling milking parlor, operated by Southwest Dairy Farmers, will include information on the modern milking process, cow anatomy and the nutritional benefits of dairy foods.

Midway

Powers Great American

Many competitors will be vying for bragging rights and ribbons in the N.C. State Fair livestock competitions.

Midways will add two new rides to its lineup of carnival attractions on the midway. The rides, Rock Star and Genesis, can each hold more than 20 passengers at a time. Each ride features a rotating arm, which lifts seated riders into the air in a clockwise motion. The N.C. State Fair boasts more than 100 carnival rides.

The N.C. State Fair will be held at the N.C. State Fairgrounds Oct. 11-21. Discount tickets are available online. Adult tickets are $6 in advance, $8 at the gate. Children's tickets are $2 in advance or $3 at the gate. Children under 6 and seniors 65 and older get in free. Ride sheets also can be purchased in advance for $10 for a sheet of 18 tickets. Tickets can be purchased online or at several retail locations throughout the greater Triangle area. For more information on this year's fair, or to buy tickets, go to www.ncstatefair.org.

Soil sampling

pled in spring instead of fall. He stumbled on the idea by accident one year when crop harvests for his area were unusually late. Because the man who normally samples for him was busy with other fields, Hardy didn't receive a soil report until May. Several months later, he put out his fall lime application using the recommendations from the spring report.

"I had GPS and soil sample data," Hardy said. "I used the previous year's yield map and the soil sample information from the spring. It worked for me. Since then, I've continued to find it more convenient to sample in spring."

Spring sampling can be effective for conscientious farmers, Farrer said, because it gives them extra time to look at data and compare prices for lime and fertilizer. "They can be ready to buy when the market is most favorable," she said. "On top of that, if they can move away from annual sampling, then they save additional time and money."

Hardy confers with Farrer if he has concerns about using fertilizer recommendations from an existing report. Soil phosphorus levels don't change very rapidly, and nitrogen recommendations are based on the crop to be grown, not on soil test measurements. Potassium levels, on the other hand, can be significantly depleted by crop uptake or leaching.

In cases of extreme or unusual weather, such as severe drought or periods of excessive rain that promote leaching, growers are advised to consult with a regional agronomist or other agricultural adviser about revising existing lime and fertilizer recommendations. If the crop is the same and weather is typical, then recommendations on NCDA&CS soil reports are generally reliable for two years.

As harvest approaches, growers across the state will automatically begin the process of soil sampling for next season. Those who use GPS technology annually are encouraged to sample judiciously, using the service primarily for preliminary identification of problem areas and establishment of baseline information on field variability. Growers who do not use GPS are advised to concentrate on fields most vulnerable to changes in fertility, for instance those with sandy soils.

In either case, it is beneficial to submit samples as early as possible. Sturdy shipping containers that can hold up to 36 soil sample boxes are available free of charge from the Agronomic Services Division. Its website also provides a bar-code tracking feature. When bar-coded packages arrive at the lab, senders receive email notification of successful delivery.

For some growers with recent soil reports, fall sampling may not be necessary. Soil information already on hand can be used to make management decisions as long as relevant site-specific factors are considered. Consultants can offer guidance on the development of nutrient-management strategies to optimize profitability and protect natural resources.
