Buy early, save money on N.C. State Fair tickets

Food Lion shoppers in North Carolina can now buy N.C. State Fair tickets along with their groceries.

"For the first time, State Fair fans can purchase discount admission and ride tickets at Food Lion stores," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "Tickets will be available from cashiers during normal business hours at Food Lion stores statewide until store closing on Oct. 13."

Advance admission tickets are $8 for adults and $3 for children, $2 less than the cost at the gate. Children 5 and under and adults 65 and over get in free.

Admission tickets for large groups cannot be purchased at Food Lion stores. For information about purchasing tickets for groups of 40 or more, visit www.ncstatefair.org.

An 18-ticket ride sheet is $10 in advance, saving fairgoers $8 off the regular price.

Discount admission, ride tickets and special combination packages for the 2016 N.C. State Fair also are on sale online at www.ncstatefair.org.

N.C. Mountain State Fair runs Sept. 9-18

The Western N.C. Ag Center in Fletcher will come alive with the sights, sounds and delicious smells of the N.C. Mountain State Fair Sept. 9-18. This annual event showcases agriculture and Western N.C. crafting and musical traditions, set against the backdrop of carnival rides, games and food.

Agriculture takes center stage with a number of educational exhibits on the grounds, including Farmer Bill's Ag-Venture, where visitors can see piglets hanging out with their mom and baby ducks navigating a water slide, and the Mooternity Ward, where calves are expected to be born each day. Other agricultural exhibits include the Agricadabra magic show, a mobile dairy classroom where visitors can learn about the milking process, and a display of farm animals.

Young and old alike will show livestock in competitions during the Mountain State Fair, with shows for meat goats, beef cattle, dairy cattle, sheep, dairy goats, rabbits, poultry and llamas.

Music, crafts, family entertainment and roving acts will round out the lineup of fun for fairgoers. On the extreme side, Moto Maniacs features daredevil motorcycle stunts and acrobatic feats, the USA Extreme Breaking Team is a high-flying martial arts act that visitors won't want to miss, and the Kenya Safari Acrobats will amaze with their balancing, acrobatic, tumbling and dance routines.

Other entertainment includes the laugh-out-loud fun of a comedy hypnotist, the Vegas-style illusion and magic show and musical performances by Leon Jacobs Jr. All grounds entertainment is free with paid fair admission.

Fair hours are Fridays, 9 a.m. to 1 a.m., Saturdays, 9 a.m. to midnight, first Sunday, 9 a.m. to 11 p.m. and second Sunday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.; Monday through Thursday, 3 p.m. to 11 p.m.

Advance tickets are $7 for adults and $3 for kids 6 to 12 and senior citizens 65 and older, or $9 and $5 at the gate. Go to www.wncagcenter.org for more information.

A number of special promotions and days are planned for the Mountain State Fair. On Friday, Sept. 9, there will be free gate admission until 6 p.m.

Commissioner Troxler

I periodically write about divisions and programs within the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services in my column, and this month I want to talk about some of the information the Agricultural Statistics Division reports.

While Ag Statistics is technically a U.S. Department of Agriculture program, its staff work in our downtown Raleigh office through an ongoing cooperative agreement.

They collect data from farmers and put out a series of reports each year on planting intentions, crop updates, weather conditions and projected yields. This information can help farmers make the best decisions on what to plant, when to market their crops and what the outlook for the crop may be.

The latest crop report, which came out Aug. 12, offers insight into anticipated production for certain crops.

We had been hearing from staff and others in the field that corn looked strong this year. The statistics report forecasts a corn yield of 130 bushels per acre, with total production over 122 million bushels. That would push production up 48 percent from the 2015 total of 82.5 million bushels.

As is typical in this stage of the growing season, weather will likely be the greatest factor in whether or not production meets expectations. We have heard from some of our regional agronomists about dry conditions that are affecting crops, particularly in the far western parts of the state. But some farms in the Piedmont and East are beginning to see heat-related stress to crops also.

Cotton is also on pace for a good year, with a yield forecast of 943 pounds per acre. That would be 230 pounds per acre better than in 2015, with production topping out at 560,000 bales.

Soybean production is anticipated to be up slightly from 2015 at 57.6 million bushels; the yield forecast is 36 bushels per acre.

Similarly, peanuts are looking at a slight increase in production with the planting of fewer acres being offset by an increase in yield. The expected production will be around 300 million pounds, with yield at 3,800 pounds per acre.

On my travels across the state, I have seen some good-looking tobacco and I have also seen some that looked a little farther behind in growth. Overall, production is expected to be down about 4 percent from 2015, with total production expected to come in around 363 million pounds.

The apple crop also looks strong this year, with farmers expected to harvest 5 million more pounds this year compared to last. Total production is forecast at 110 million

N.C. sweet potatoes make the rounds at festivals in Germany

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' International Marketing Section recently partnered with the N.C. SweetPotato Commission to sponsor a food truck introducing N.C. sweet potatoes and sweet potato recipes in Germany.

The food truck traveled across Germany, stopping at festivals in Augsburg, Berlin, Cologne, Dortmund, Hamburg and Stuttgart. A member of the food truck team reports sweet potato fries were especially popular with consumers. In Stuttgart, the demand was so great, the food truck kept a long line for nearly three hours.

The goal of the program is to introduce sweet potatoes to general consumers abroad in order to increase demand for North Carolina-grown sweet potatoes. Germany is one of several European markets where sweet potatoes have found success overseas. The department's international marketing staff is also working on outreach in the United Kingdom, France and Scandinavia.

North Carolina is the nation's leader in sweet potato production, growing more than half of all U.S. sweet potatoes.

N.C. Forest Service updates fees for woodland plans

The N.C. Forest Service's updated fee schedule for woodland management plans recently took effect.

The updated fee structure allows certain types of woodland plans to be provided to landowners without a fee. These supplementary plans typically address single forestry practices, such as tree planting, thinning and prescribed burning on individual stands of trees.

Fees for comprehensive forest management and forest stewardship plans will have a flat charge of $5 per acre. Such plans are more detailed and often qualify the landowner for the state's Forestry Present Use Valuation Program. Property tax savings from one year of participating in the PUV program can often offset the fee for the plan. Fees associated with woodland plan preparation may also be a deductible expense for tax purposes.

Under the previous fee schedule, the per acre fee was coupled with a $45 base fee per land parcel. The base fee has been eliminated.

"Ultimately, our goal is to provide the best service for landowners that we can, and these updated fees for woodland plans will be a lot easier for landowners to manage," said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. "We think more landowners will take advantage of the financial and environmental benefits a woodland plan provides."

The N.C. Board of Agriculture approved the update July 26, and the fees became effective Aug. 1. The N.C. Forest Service began charging fees for certain plans in 2014 at the direction of the General Assembly.

Woodland plans provide detailed forestry recommendations, but they can also advise landowners on wildlife habitat, soil and water protection, recreation opportunities, and insect and disease concerns. In addition, they can help qualify landowners for forestry recognition and certification programs.

Landowners interested in state or federal cost-share programs typically need an approved woodland plan. Participation in many of these programs results in a cost savings of 40 percent or more. Cost-share payments help to reduce the initial capital investment needed for many forestry projects, which leads to higher overall financial returns to the forestland owner.

Landowners interested in forestry advice and a woodland plan should contact their county ranger for details. Landowners also can call the N.C. Forest Service's central office at 919-857-4801 for assistance.

The peach crop hasn't fared as well, which was expected because of a late spring freeze. The statistics report projects production down 31 percent from 2015.

I hope you will make use of the reports from Agricultural Statistics. You can find reports, along with information from the Census of Agriculture, online at www.ncagr.gov/stats/latest.htm.

Bucolic briefs

The N.C. Simmental Association's Fall Harvest Sale will be Sept. 3 at noon at the Shuffler Sale Facility in Union Grove. The sale includes Simmental, SimAngus and some Simmental-influenced commercial bulls, cow/calf pairs, bred cows, and bred and open heifers, along with quality embryo lots. Online bidding through DV Auction is available for those who cannot attend. To see an online catalog, go to www.ncsimmental.com or email ncsa@yadtel.net.

The 75th Annual North Carolina Gourd Arts and Crafts Festival will be held Sept. 10-11 at the Holshouser Building, State Fairgrounds in Raleigh. Hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Sunday. The festival features displays of gourds from around the world, special gourd workshops, gourd arts and crafts, a gourd crafting table for kids, and auction on Saturday and items for sale. There will be competitions in a number of categories with ribbons and prizes awarded to the winners. For information on how to enter the competitions, go to www.ncgourdsociety.org/festival, or call 919-696-0744 for more information.

The Lincoln County Apple Festival will be held Sept. 17 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. in downtown Lincolnton. The free event features crafts, food, entertainment and the county's signature crop -- apples. For more information, go to the festival's website at www.lincolncountyapplefestival.com/

The 3rd annual Garlic Fest will be held Oct. 1 from noon to 6 p.m. at Southslope in Asheville. The event, sponsored by Sow True Seeds, features garlic tastings including unique and creative garlic dishes, classes and tips for growing garlic. For more information, go to www.wncgarlicfest.com or call 828-254-0708.

As a way to help farmers and agricultural workers stay safe at work, the N.C. Department of Labor offers safety videos on a variety of topics through its YouTube channel. Video topics include: preventing green tobacco sickness, hazard communication, tobacco harvester safety, heat stress, migrant housing requirements, forklift safety, and information about the NCDOL's Gold Star Growers program. The videos are in English and Spanish to increase understanding of safety hazards and preventing accidents. To learn more about the NCDOL and the Agricultural Safety and Health Bureau, go to www.nclabor.com or call 1-800-NC-LABOR (800-625-2267). NCDOL is also on Facebook and Twitter (@NCDOL).

Beekeepers with bees for rent and growers interested in bee pollination services can post their information on the BeeLinked website at www.ncagr.com/beelinked. The site is hosted by the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services and the N.C. State University Apiculture Program. Anyone interested in listing their information can do so by filling out an online Submit Your Ad form on the BeeLinked page or by contacting NCDA&CS at 919-233-8214 or by email at NCHoneybee@ncagr.gov or call NCSU at 919-515-1660. The NCDA&CS Plant Industry Division regulates the movement of agricultural or related items capable of spreading harmful insects, diseases, and other pests. Beekeepers participating in this program will be required to comply with all honey and bee industry regulations.

The N.C. Ag Finance Authority provides credit to agriculture in areas where financing is not available at reasonable rates and terms. The agency originates, services and finances farm loans, rural business loans, disaster loans and cotton gin loans. It also offers tax-exempt ag development bonds for agribusiness processing, ag-related manufacturing or ag waste disposal. For more about Ag Finance Authority programs or to request a loan application, call 919-790-3949 or email at RequestLoanInfo@ncagr.gov.

Get planning now for the N.C. State Fair competitions

What could be finer than winning a blue ribbon at the N.C. State Fair? How about also helping neighbors in need. The new Shawls for a Cause and Hats for a Cause competitions in the Clothing and Home Furnishing departments will do just that by helping people fighting cancer. All entries will be donated to local cancer treatment facilities, and contestants will have the opportunity to sign cards for the recipients of their handiwork.

"I noticed other fairs would adopt social causes and attach them to their competitions," said Denise Walker, competitive exhibits director. "It's a chance to give back to the community and revitalize categories that haven't had a lot of entries rather than doing away with them."

Other new contests include a Cavy Costume Contest, the Pre-Apprentice Pre-Engineering Mobile Robotics Contest, the Commissioner's Favorite Cookie Award and a new coffee roasting competition open to licensed N.C. coffee roasters. Also, new "on-the-spot" contests have been added, including the Kids Sugar Cube Building Contest for ages

4 to 12 and the Team Cake Decorating Contest for ages 13 and up. Competitors will sign up for the on-the-spot contests the day of the contest. Spaces are limited.

Two competitions have been expanded. The Egg Art Competition added a Young Artists Category for ages 18 and under in the Handicrafts and Hobbies Department. There are also new Group Home categories under the Exceptional/Special Needs Category in the Culinary and Handicrafts and Hobbies departments.

Competitors can visit www.ncstatefair.org to find the 2016 State Fair General Premium Book and Livestock Premium Book, which are only available online. The Web pages have instructions, rules, entry forms and deadlines for each contest. Those without Internet access can contact the entry department at 919-839-4515 for assistance.

Entry forms may be submitted online. Paper entry forms must be submitted by 5 p.m., and online registrations must be submitted by 11:59 p.m. on the deadline date for the individual competitions.

For more information, visit www.ncstatefair.org.

POULTRY & SUPPLIES

Highly pathogenic avian influenza alert

In 2015, HPAI was found in the wildfowl population in the United States, representing a risk for poultry owners. At this time no cases have been found in North Carolina.

Poultry owners are encouraged, however, to watch their birds for any signs of illness and to contact a veterinarian if they find sick birds.

Growers can also contact one of four NCDA&CS regional veterinary diagnostic labs for more information. Go to www.ncagr.gov/vet/hcvdl/VetLabFacilitiesDirectory.html for contact information.

As this disease can spread by infected wildfowl, it is important to eliminate opportunities for your birds to come in contact with wild birds.

Owners are also urged to be extra mindful of biosecurity measures to prevent the spread of this disease.

This includes quarantining any new poultry additions from your existing flock for two to three weeks to observe for signs of sickness, have a dedicated pair of shoes and clothing for working with birds that stay on your property, be mindful if driving onto property with poultry as the disease can spread by vehicles. More information about HPAI can be found at www.ncagr.gov/avianflu.

Spring Lake farm growing and teaching others

Spence Farm in Spring Lake does more than just feed the physical needs of the community, it also nurtures the souls of those it interacts with.

Owners Ed and Sheila Spence operate the farm, run a roadside stand and sell at nearby markets each week. While that would seem to be enough to keep most people busy, the Spences also host workshops at the farm through N.C. A&T State University for people who think they may be interested in farming, such as veterans transitioning from the military into civilian life.

It is a path Ed Spence knows well. When he retired from the military, Spence returned to the familiar roots of the farm.

He said hosting veterans at the farm and having them volunteer gives them a more realistic understanding of the work it takes to run a small farm.

"When a vet comes here, we ask, 'What have you done and how do you know this is what you want to do?'" This gives them a chance to see if they really want to do this," Ed Spence said. "It's a lot of work. Anything you do is a lot of work, but what you put in, you get out, too."

For some volunteer veterans, just the experience of working the land and being outside is enough reward, providing a quiet space for reflection, recovery and reconnection. For others, the experience helps them figure out farming is not for them, something Ed Spence also sees as a valuable lesson.

"By the time a beginning farmer gets going, he's spent $100,000, and maybe $200,000 by the third or the fourth year," he said.

The Spences started their farm from ground zero with a microloan to veterans from the U.S. Department of Agriculture for small and niche farms. Now five years into it, their operation is over three acres, including a couple of greenhouses to extend the growing season through the winter.

Along the way, they have slowly added to their farm offerings, listening to the requests of their customers, watching food trends, trying new things, investing back into their operation and learning along the way. Ed Spence recognizes the advantages he has as a military retiree with an income to rely on as he grows his business.

During a recent visit, it was clear Spence had made his peace with the chores and challenges of farming. With a long to-do list in his head, Spence and his granddaughter, were busy feeding and watering chickens in the backyard.

Freshly dug trenches were awaiting one of the newest additions to the farm – an au-

Ed and Sheila Spence operate Spence Family Farms in Spring Lake, where they host military veterans who think they may want to venture into farming after their service. They sell their produce at their roadside stand and at farmers markets in Fayetteville. At left, the Spences received a cost-share grant from the USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service to install an irrigation system at the farm. The system will save water and improve the efficiency of the operation.

tomated irrigation system. The Spences were able to secure a Natural Resources Conservation Service cost-share grant for small farmers with the help of Jacob Crandall, an agricultural program specialist with the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services' Small Farms Program.

This system will help Spence more efficiently manage the water and nutrient needs of his plants.

Understanding what programs are available for small farms and then navigating the paperwork involved in applying for loans and grants can be daunting for farmers who have a lot on their plates already, Crandall said. "That's one of the things I do, is to help show them what is available out there and figure out what they need to do to apply," he said. "I work with them and guide them through the process."

NCDA&CS received a grant from NRCS that covers Crandall's work. As a retired USDA employee who has knowledge of many of the agency's programs and opportunities, Crandall's experience is invaluable to small farmers such as Spence.

"Jacob has been a big push in us getting this grant, and his help has made things easier. The first couple of years I was green, and didn't know the right questions to ask," Ed Spence said. "I don't want this to just be a hobby. I want to be a sustainable farming business. I am trying to work smarter, not harder."

In the mix of the family's operation are several small-plot-intensive beds where they grow a variety of vegetables in close proximity, including carrots, kale, garlic, Swiss chard, leaf lettuce and beets. The beds feature short, closely spaced rows that Sheila Spence enjoys working in.

The spacing allows Sheila Spence to harvest three rows at a time, which seems more manageable than staring down the more traditional long rows that they also grow using plasticulture.

The plantings in the intensive beds vary depending on the time of the year, with winter vegetables rotating in once the summer plants are finished. Sheila Spence explained that she tends to leave weeds between the rows to help control pests. "The bugs are eating the weeds, and as long as they are eating the weeds and not the kale then I am good," she said.

The Spences sell their harvest on Tuesdays and Thursdays at their roadside stand, and also travel weekly to a gated community market, Fayetteville City Market and a farmers market at Fayetteville State University that was started to serve a neighboring area identified as a food desert.

Marketing remains essential to growing their customer base. Although the farm is not certified organic, the Spences produce crops without the use of pesticides and commercial fertilizers, something their customers appreciate, Sheila Spence said.

Agritourism visits from area schools have also been a more recent addition, and the Spences enjoy showing kids where their food comes from, even giving them a chance to pick strawberries and blueberries.

Ed Spence said he loves teaching children about growing fruits and vegetables so they have an awareness of the role farmers play in producing the foods found in grocery stores.
